

RECYCLED COTTON

Recycled Cotton is an eco-friendly material choice for the promotional industry, offering a sustainable alternative to virgin cotton. It is made from pre-consumer and post-consumer cotton waste, such as discarded textile scraps and used garments. By recycling cotton, the industry helps reduce the environmental impact associated with traditional cotton production, which is often resource-intensive and involves significant water and pesticide use.

Promotional products made from recycled cotton can include tote bags, apparel, and accessories. These items retain the natural softness and breathability of cotton, making them comfortable and practical for everyday use. By choosing recycled cotton for promotional products, companies can showcase their commitment to sustainability and responsible resource use.

Recycled cotton not only conserves natural resources but also reduces the amount of textile waste sent to landfills. It contributes to a circular economy, where materials are reused and recycled, minimizing waste and environmental degradation. Additionally, recycled cotton often requires less energy and water to produce compared to virgin cotton, further enhancing its environmental benefits.
